My manual says the manual transmission fluid capacity is 4.5qst. On refill, mine topped out at a little more than 3qts. The same manual specifies the trans axle to be 3.5qts.

steering system uses the same oil as the transmission (synthetic multi-vehicle ATF). The brake and clutch hydraulic systems use DOT-3 brake fluid. Each system uses a separate reservoir marked with full lines to ensure proper levels are maintained. Always check the reservoirs with each oil change, and fill as needed.

BE VERY CAREFUL TO USE THE CORRECT FLUID!!! If is a 2005 and up, It takes a special fluid that you can only get from Nissan. If it is an automatic, It takes matic "S" fluid. If it is a manual, make sure you get the correct weight. Using any other fluid in the automatic trannys will destroy it!

I had the same issue with my 2005 Xterra S (4WD). Transmission started slipping at about 90,000 miles. Dealer diagnosed the problem as a break in the line that cooled the transmission fluid inside the radiator. They replaced the radiator and flushed the transmission and replaced all the fluids. Total cost of a little over $1,000.
